

Dear colleagues,

In November 2019, the American Psychological Association and the Portuguese Order of Psychologists co-convened the inaugural International Summit on Psychology and Global Health: A Leader in Climate Action, in Lisbon, Portugal.

At the Climate Summit, presidents, and CEOs of 46 national, regional, and international psychology associations adopted a joint proclamation and resolution affirming their commitment to acting on climate at the organizational level.

In 2022 the Psychological Society of Ireland (PSI) established the Special Interest Group for Addressing Climate and Environmental Emergency (SIG-ACEE).

On 26 June 2023, PSI Council voted in favour of a motion to sign the 2019 Lisbon proclamation and resolution, endorsing its contents and joining with our colleagues internationally in promoting the important role of psychology in responding to climate change.

Anne Kehoe
President, Psychological Society of Ireland
